

Depression: asking the right questions

Questions about depression? We want to hear from you

Your questions will help inform depression research. Help us find the most important issues.

We are gathering questions from:

- People who have, or have had, depression.
- The carers, friends and families of people affected by depression.
- Health and social care professionals who work with people with depression.

Our survey gives patients, carers and clinicians a chance to let us know what questions need to be answered. Questions can be about any aspect of depression; prevention, causes, diagnosis, treatments or care.

Visit www.depressionarq.org to take part

The partners in this project will work together to rank all the questions we receive into a list of top priorities. These will be made available to the public, researchers and research funders. We aim to inform research and provide a strong connection between researchers and the needs of patients. We hope to encourage research that can make a real difference to people's lives.

Funding Partners:

A James Lind Alliance Partnership:

Supporting Partners:

Autism Research
British Neuroscience Association
Centre for Mental Health
Cochrane Collaboration Depression, Anxiety and Neurosis Group

Epilepsy UK
Marie Curie
The McPin Foundation
The Mental Elf
Mind

MND Association
Nottingham Healthcare NHS Trust
Place2Be
Rethink Mental Illness

Sane
Service User Research Enterprise,
King's College London